

A Message on COVID-19 from our Chief Nurse

[VIDEO TRANSCRIPT – April 2, 2020]

Hello, this is Anne Dabrow Woods, Chief Nurse of Wolters Kluwer Health, Learning, Research and Practice. We are in unprecedented times. Never before have we seen an outbreak like we've seen with the COVID-19 pandemic. As health care professionals, we are tasked with taking care of patients when we don't have enough supplies and resources, we don't have enough staffing, but yet we run towards adversity to take care of our patients because that is the most important thing to us is helping people get through this crisis. We know we won't be able to save everyone but we need to change that talk track and focus on saving the ones that we can and doing what we can, one patient at a time. I want to thank you for all your hard work and dedication to our profession. As a practicing nurse practitioner myself I have to say I think this is the time with the Year of the Nurse that we're really going to define who we are as a profession and what we can do as a profession. So thank you so much for all your efforts and dedication. You're saving people's lives each and every day.
